

Professor Keith Stokes

Director of the Centre for Health and Injury and Illness Prevention in Sport

University of Bath

Professor Keith Stokes joined the University of Bath in 2002 and is a Professor of Applied Physiology. He completed a PhD at Loughborough University in 2001 and was a Lecturer at Stirling University from 2001-2.

Research projects

- English Professional Rugby Injury Surveillance Project
- Community Rugby Injury Surveillance Project
- Analysis of spinal injury in horse racing
- Catastrophic injury surveillance in rugby
- Injury epidemiology and injury prevention in cricket
- Comparing risks of injury across sports

Research interests

- Injury surveillance
- Injury prevention

Keith Stokes — the University of Bath's research portal